

WORLD'S MOST EXCLUSIVE AUCTION HOUSE FOR RACING PIGEONS

▼ Family Gyselbrecht in the early years of PIPA.

Dear pigeon fanciers,

Twenty years ago the name PIPA did not even exist. There was already a website about pigeon racing but the PIPA domain name was not registered until 16th of December 2000. We could say that the publication of this catalogue marks the twentieth birthday of PIPA. Twenty years is a long time, even though I still feel young. And in a way it does not feel that long at all, because it went by so fast. We have grown a lot and we developed very quickly. And the best part is that PIPA was never intended to develop into a company; it was rooted in a passion for pigeon racing.

I have been passionate about pigeon racing from a young age. For instance, I witnessed the arrival of the 1995 1st International Barcelona of my grandfather Remi. I was 15 at the time and did not yet fully appreciate what had just happened. It was not until many years later, and to this day, that I began to understand the true impact of this achievement. In any case, this victory from Barcelona clearly boosted my interest in pigeon racing. The following year I eagerly started developing a website that would serve as an information platform for fanciers from across the globe. At the time, I had no intention to make money out of it. The idea of creating an auction house for pigeons only came up when I had to decide between looking for a job or continuing the PIPA project. I graduated in 2003 and I knew

I had to try and generate money from PIPA. I asked my father Carlo if he happened to have a pigeon for sale, and that one pigeon led to several others. I am very grateful that my grandfather took that important victory. Laureaat Barcelona, which my father had bred, was a fabulous looking racing bird. I have always had the utmost respect for what my father and grandfather achieved in pigeon racing and beyond. Meanwhile, my father and mother have always been very supportive towards me and my brother.

For instance, I had my first computer at a very young age and we had an internet connection very early on as well. My family has always been there for me. I used to study at my grandfather's home because it was very quiet there, with few distractions. He motivated me, just like he used to motivate his own kids. My brother has been very important to me as well. He would back me up at PIPA any time I was going through a difficult time, and I am still very grateful for that. He continued his involvement with PIPA and he contributed a lot to the further development of the project. In all honesty, I never would have made it this far without the help of my family. And chances are, PIPA would not even exist if my family had not been rooted in pigeon racing. I would like to send a sincere thank you to all of you. My wife has been very supportive over the years as well, even though I was often away from home and we could not spend a lot of time together.

Twenty years of hard work, twenty years of commitment day and night. It has paid off. My father, my brother, myself, close friends like Martin Degrave and the many employees and agents – together we have turned PIPA into what it is today: the most exclusive auction house for pigeons worldwide! And I am very proud of it. This "child" from back in the day has become an "adolescent", and our adolescent is doing just fine.

Entrepreneurship is something I had to familiarize myself with over the years. It is an art that has to be developed in small steps. You have to progressively gain an insight into a variety of processes in order to try and get a grip on your company. Making decisions in everyone's interest and in the interest of the company is vitally important, in the short term but particularly in the long term. I honestly think that this sets me apart from most other entrepreneurs: I would never choose to pursue short-term success if it could potentially harm PIPA's interests in the long term. We often make decisions that might not have an immediate impact but that will prove beneficial in the long term.

Of course I would also like to thank our suppliers and buyers. Without their trust, PIPA would not be where it is today. Everyone that is involved with our organization in some way or another has helped us take us where we are today. We form one big chain in which each link is just as important and just as indispensable. A big thank you to everyone who contributes or has contributed to the PIPA success story!

And lastly I will say a few words about this catalogue. It is a short summary of some special auctions that we are hosting in the upcoming auction season. We are indeed very proud to be launching this catalogue. And we are proud that so many successful and trusted pigeon fanciers with an international reputation have chosen our platform to organize their pigeon auction. I think the upcoming season might be the most unique season we have ever had. We have never had so many high quality pigeons on offer. The next couple of months will be very special, and this is thanks to twenty years of hard work. A success story never happens overnight. Great things do not come out of the blue.

Small loft, great results

Auctions of all pigeons minus one round of youngsters born in 2020

Start auction:
November 23rd 2020
End auction:
December 6th 2020

The big secret behind the success story of Gevaert-Lannoo is the great strength of their small team. They built their breeding loft around proven racing hens that have multiple provincial victories, great results and acebird titles at national or International level to their name. Only taking the very best to stock, year after year, resulted in one of the best middle and great middle distance colonies of Belgium. With key-position for the base breeding hens 'Chateauke' & 'Kaafje' ... and 3 of the best breeding (gr.)sons of 'Bliksem' & 'Rudy' Vandenabeele ever; 'Bliksem CEO', 'Bliksem Gaby' & 'King Gaby'. A synergy of upper class resulting in a team with an incomparable ability to win.

One of the leading names in Dutch marathon racing over the last 30 years ... that is the status of Harry and Roger Wijnands. They are famous for their (Inter) national victories and the long list of fanciers winning with their pigeons. Names like 'Kleine Jo', 'Olano', 'De Soustons', 'Pozzato', 'Blauwe Vanoppen' and 'De Witneus' have become famous because of their super performances and capacity to breed champions in many generations. Without a doubt the Wijnands pigeons are amongst the very best ever in the history of Dutch extreme long distance racing.
